NATIONALIST

Volunteer Organization Has influence Upon the British Public.

Introduces a Momentons Factor Into the Whole Irish Situation.

Beifnst Has Hegun to Feel the Severe Pressure of Present Uncertainty,

FINAL CONDITIONS IMPOSE PEACE

We have had a week of sleepy tranquility in the liouse of Commons and scarcely a mention, oxcept incidentally, of the Irish question, but the Irish question still haunts everybody's thoughts and every one watches with greatest scrutiny every speech or incident which may seem to forecast the uncertnin future, says Ilon. T. P. O'Connor in his weekly cablegram. The outstanding factor of the week is Redmond's open approval of the Nationniist volunteer movement. Everybody recognizes that this introduces a momentous new factor into the whole situation. The argument thint refusal of home rule invoived dangers quite as reni to peace n Ireland as that threatened by the Uister Orangemen now ls realized by English opinion, which was rnther inclined to accept the view hammered in by the Tories that, hecause Southern ireiand presented such a contrast in its tranquility to Northern effervescence, home 'rule had ceased to be as passionately demanded as ever. The National volunteers produced further effect by proving to the Orangemen that they will not, if they hegin attacks victims, as in the riots of two years ago.

The Tories also are brought face to face with some of the inevitable concequences that follow Carson's appeal to rifies. By curious and expected contradiction the Tories of England aiready are heginaing to demand the suppression of the National volunteers, forgetful of their patronage of the similar movement by the Orange volunteers. A further factor which helps towards a settle-ment of the Irish question, hy producing n reaction against Carsonism, is the continued ferocity of the suffragists, which now presents to the English public the enormous growth in lawiessness which Carsonism invoives. A further indication of this disastrous change in the old Engsh attitude of law-nbidingness given during the dehate on the new nsurance act for the unemployed by the open threat of labor iendera that when a slump followed the present gigantic trade hoom the workingmen without employment and without food would not accept conditions with the same resignation as in the past, and would foliow the example of Carson's Orange-

Thus though Carson's speeches in Uister and Bonar Law's last speech ln Scotland breathe the party fury, and though the dle-hards are at present in the ascendency in persist in helieving that the whole struggie wili end in some settlement in the absence of firm among the Tories, Bonar Lnw being much discredited. It is still helieved that Carson would welcome a solution, but finds his difficulty in the greater violence of bis own followers. There are rumors of dissensions in the Orange forces. Some extremists already are beginning to suspect that Carson may agree some settlement they detest, but other forces from n different direction make Carson's position more difficult. Business Beifast at last ls beginning to feel the severe pressure of this uncertainty, and this ia accentuated by the great interruption of husiness relations with Southern Ireland. It is announced in the London Tory organ that recently five linen merchants of Beifast have failed.

It is difficult to forecast what precise form settlement finally will take. It may be peace, it may rupture. On one haud the die-hards may get the House of Lords to re-ject the amending hill in the hope of provoking a reheliion in Uister and Chairman thereby forcing the Government to an immediate general election, and Tory organizers certainly are preparing for an election in July. I remain conviuced that the amending biil wiii be passed weeks and that ultimately the universal feeling in favor of settlement wiil hring the party leaders Into Including perhaps Redmond and Carson, and that a scheme wiii he hammered out which at once guarantee liberty and unity to Ire-
